By: Glenn DiPasquale, Ph.D., C. Psych.
Registered Psychologist

Dr. Glenn DiPasquale is a Registered Psychologist. Glenn was a School Psychologist with the York Region District School Board for three decades, including 17 years as Chief Psychologist, before leaving to establish a private practice as a speaker, consultant and writer. He is in high demand as a speaker on a wide variety of topics related to School Psychology, wellness and education.

The Presentation:

Glenn describes his presentation as: "Childhood bullying is steeped in mythology and often painful memories for adults, and as a result we tend to have a distorted view of the reality of this potentially serious issue. In this presentation Glenn will discuss what research has revealed about bullying among children, particularly how and why it happens, the long-term effects and the significance of bullying for recent concerns about youth violence. He will also address the interventions, both at home and in school, that have been shown to be most likely to reduce or prevent the problem."
